

About me

Hi, I'm Kamini, based in Frankfurt.

I am a Data analyst with a background in teaching and sales.

My teaching experience enables me to effectively communicate complex data concepts to stakeholders, making data-driven insights accessible and actionable.

At the same time, working in Retail, I've had the opportunity to apply my analytical skills to real-world scenarios. From optimizing inventory management to analysing sales trends, I've gained practical experience that compliments my formal education. This hands-on experience has reinforced the importance of data in driving business decisions and sparked my passion for delving deeper into the world of data analysis.

With my strong analytical mindset and problem solving, I am enthusiastic about new opportunities to embark on a career in data analytics.
